EXHIBITION

ISMSE 14th ICPMSE 12th

CNES is organizing the 14th International Symposium on Materials in the Space Environment (ISMSE) in collaboration with ESA and ONERA, and the 12th International Conference on Protection of Materials from Space Environment (ICPMSE) with the Integrity Testing Laboratory (ITL).

The conference will be held in Biarritz (France), at the Bellevue Conference Center, from October 1st to 5th, 2018.

Mission and ground storage duration, specific space environment severity and material performance requirements are increasing. Cost and time reduction are now also main drivers.

New technologies are implemented and they need a specific analysis: e. g. electric propulsion, additive manufacturing... New constraints such as ecodesign, design for demise, regulations, export control, obsolescence must define the choice and the qualification of the materials. The application in the launchers, satellites and balloons activities are concerned.

This is why the behavior of materials in the space environment remains a major concern.

Who attends the conference?

This symposium will promote interactions across scientists and engineers involved in materials for space applications and in space environment effects on materials. More than 150 people will attend the conference.

Why be a partner? – Benefits from this event

- Position your product: Smart marketers spend a lot of time deciding how to "position" their products or services in the consumer's mind. If you DO choose the right positioning for your product or service, and communicate it forcefully to your target audience, you can ultimately build a strong brand identity that can have enduring value.
- Brand exposure: With the quality and number of visitors in attendance, exhibiting at this conference gives you brand exposure to the sort of people who will actually buy your services. Remember, being in the same room as your competitors only increases brand awareness if your customers are there to see you...
- Networking: This conference will extend business, networking and learning opportunities beyond the event venue and successfully acts as a bridge between China and the international market.
- Connections: It is not only a conference but also a platform that you can meet your clients, prospects and friends or seek potential business opportunity.
